Bomb squad display will intrigue again this year.

Police dogs will be at the open house to demonstrate their abilities.

Get a close-up look at your local law enforcement at the Lemon Grove Sheriff's open house set for Saturday, August 19 from 11 a.m.–3 p.m. The Sheriff's station is located at 3240 Main St., Lemon Grove.

Demonstrations of patrol dogs, the crime computer and the Fire Arms Training System, as well as traffic radar will be conducted. Shake paws with McGruff, the national crime-fighting dog and bring a camera to have your photograph taken with the famous law enforcement mascot.

In celebration of his 9th birthday, free balloons will be given to children.

There will be displays of bomb/arson, C.A.T. (anti-auto theft program), crime prevention, the communications center (9-1-1) and other Sheriff's units.

Free hot dogs, sodas and ice cream for visitors will be provided. Call 441-4037 for more information.

Traffic stats for July released

For the month of July, 1271 speeding citations were issued by the California Highway Patrol. Along with 1456 seatbelt citations, 38 were for improper or no child car seats, 1542 were for driving without insurance, and 355 were for illegally tinted windshields.

In addition, 303 driving under the influence arrests were made, according to Bob Melton, Community Relations Officer for the California Highway Patrol.

City Council clowns around before getting to serious business

The Lemon Grove City Council began the August 7th Council Meeting with some "clowning around" before getting down to serious agenda items. Mayor Jim Dorman read a proclamation honoring clowns for bringing a little humor into our lives. It seems that August 7-13 is National Clown Week, and lemon Grove wanted to do its part to spotlight its many clowns.

The consent agenda included merit salary step increases for: Benjamin Epler, Recreation Leader; Donald Adams, Recreation Leader; Julian Moore, Community Development Secretary; Donald Garcia, Street Maintenance Worker; and Timothy Smith, Firefighter.

The Council received a letter and oral communication from three local drinking establishments who wish to see the limitations on the number of amusement devices, (games), increased from four per establishment to eight. The Council referred the matter to staff for study, saying that the law was ten years old and may need to be given a new look.

In another matter, the Council sent to the Planning Commission a request for development of the property at 8083 Broadway owned by John N Blake, Inc. The Council had previously held up development because the redevelopment agency was negotiating a larger project.

The Council passed resolutions of: Intent to approve an amendment to the Public Employees Retirement Contract to make up to four years of military service count for retirement credit for City employees; Authorizing the mayor to sign a new Refuse Franchise Agreement with EDCO, the present provider; Acceptance of public improvements at Olive and Central, and amending conditions of approval of Parcel map 0111 so the eucalyptus tree on the property can be saved.

In regards to the San Diego County Water Authority's Water Distribution Plan, (to put a pipeline through Lemon Grove), the Council was generally opposed to allowing the water authority to proceed without a definitive Memorandum of Understanding regarding the concerns which the City had already expressed to the Water Authority.

The Water Authority suggested the adoption of the Environmental Impact Report (EIR) and that they would "endeavor to enter into a Memorandum of Understanding with the City of Lemon Grove." The Council didn't accept this language and selected Mayor Jim Dorman to plead the City's case one more time at the Water Authority Board Meeting at 4 p.m. on August 10, 1989.

The City will urge the Water Authority Board not to adopt the EIR and to guarantee a Memorandum of Understanding with Lemon Grove.

However, if the Water Authority Board votes to adopt the EIR, (which they are likely to de), Lemon Grove may be forced to sue the Water Authority, claiming that the EIR is inadequate to enable the two parties to come to an agreement. The Water Authority doesn't want to be delayed, and is motivated to avoid a lawsuit. However, holes in the EIR may force further delays, if an acceptable compromise can't be reached within 30 days of adoption of the EIR. The City of La Mesa could also elect to holdup th project, even if Lemon Grove comes to terms.

The Helix Water District supports the project, but has asked the Water Authority to go out of their way to solve the problems in a fair manner.

Valley Grove offers unique senior programs

By Fran Rottet

Many senior citizens in the Lemon Grove/Spring Valley area are missing out on a variety of programs designed expressly for them by the Valley Grove Senior Programs.

The Valley Grove Senior Programs were established in 1974 and are governed by a Nutrition Board made up of five area organizations: Soroptimist International of Lemon Grove, Lemon Grove Kiwanis, First Methodist Church of Lemon Grove, the Lemon Grove United Church of Christ Congregational and the Spring Valley Kiwanis. Three members of each organization make up the Nutrition Board.

This project is supported by Older Americans Acts funds awarded by the County of San Diego through the Area Agency on Aging. The funding covers management costs, operational expenses and the midday meal program.

It does not cover 100% of the costs, therefore the five governing organizations must provide additional funds and must rely on the assistance of volunteers. Donations are accepted to cover the cost of the meals.

Each site—Lemon Grove and Spring Valley—has a project council which encourages input from the seniors. Concerns, questions or problems that pop up are then brought to the Nutrition Board for consideration, recommendation or direction.

Many informal activities are planned throughout the month. These activities include Singalongs, workbasket programs, bingo, social services, educational programs and outreach programs. All seniors are encouraged to take advantage of the midday meal and enjoy the programs provided.

The Lemon Grove site has been at the Community Center since the inception of the program in April, 1974. Approximately $150 rent is paid each month on a 5-day week basis, for 5 hours each day. Criteria calls for 80 meals a day; the average served is 75, according to the figure taken from June's count.

The Spring Valley site is the Community Center on Jamacha Boulevard. Rent is $250 per month, 5 days a week for 4 hours each day. Approximately 50 seniors are served at the facility, according to June's figures.

To insure continued funding and the number of meals allotted to each location, it is imperative that the criteria of 80 be met on a daily basis at BOTH locations.

If you are not familiar with the Nutrition Program and its activities and would like additional information, please call the Main Office at 460-0430 between 8 a.m.–4 p.m.

If you want a good, nutritious midday meal at a low, low cost and fellowship with your neighbors, call the Main Office and let them know whether you live in Lemon Grove or Spring Valley and which day you wish to attend.

So Seniors—come take advantage of the variety of programs designed expressly for you by the Valley Grove Senior Programs.

It's the Law

By Timothy W.J. O'Brien

Question: I am a small businessman. One of my customers has been delinquent on their account for several months. Recently I received a one-page notice from the Bankruptcy Court notifying me that my customer had filed for bankruptcy. The notice is in legalese and is difficult to understand. What does it mean?

Answer: The document you received is probably entitled "Order for Meeting of Creditors, Combined with Notice Thereof and of Automatic Stay." If so, it does indeed mean that your customer has filed for bankruptcy. The document provides you with certain information you need to participate in the bankruptcy process.

First, however, you should know a few basic things about all bankruptcies.

The two most common forms of bankruptcy are a "Chapter 11" bankruptcy, in which the debtor is attempting to reorganize, and a "Chapter 7," in which the debtor is liquidating its assets.

There are other possibilities as well; a "Chapter 12" for a family farmer, and a "Chapter 13" for an individual wage-earner. Each type of bankruptcy has its particular features, but all have the common goal of providing fair treatment for all creditors.

When a business or an individual files for bankruptcy protection, creditors are "stayed" — or prohibited — from taking any further action to collect their debts from the debtor without court permission. If you deliberately violate the stay you may be subject to penalties.

As a creditor, you generally have the right to receive the same treatment that other creditors in your position receive. If you have a perfected security interest in collateral for your debt, you are entitled to protection of your rights in the collateral. If you are such a "secured" creditor, and the collateral is worth a significant amount, you may wish to hire a bankruptcy lawyer to represent you.

Generally, a bankruptcy discharges the debtor's obligations to all creditors. In certain limited circumstances (including fraud), however, certain debts may not be dischargeable.

Finally, the notice you receive from the Bankruptcy Court indicates whether you should file a "proof of claim." A "proof of claim" is a form you may file setting forth the basis of your claim against the debtor. It is one page long, is available from the Bankruptcy Court, and can be completed and filed by a layman.

The bankruptcy laws are designed to ensure that all creditors are treated fairly. The systems works well, though it can be frustratingly slow. If you are an unsecured creditor, unless you are owed a very large amount, hiring a lawyer to take further action is unnecessary and probably uneconomical.

In general, it's best to wait for further information from the debtor or the Bankruptcy Court. Meanwhile, remember that you are prohibited from taking any action to collect your debt without court approval.

Commentary

by Max Goodwin

If you've lost faith in HUD and EXXON, add elections. It is being shown that the department, created to provide housing for the elderly and impoverished, was used to make dishonest politicians and fast-buck boys rich.

Spell it Greed.

EXXON, from the very top of the corporation, promised to clean up its gigantic oil spill in Alaska immediately and expediently. Now, EXXON appears to be having second thoughts. Good-bye expediency, hello shareholders! The cost of the cleanup is so great, shareholders might become disturbed. If EXXON doesn't clean it up, hello taxpayers. Again, spell it Greed.

Now about that November election. The public voted to impose a 20% rollback of auto insurance rates. Proposition 103 was the issue of choice. The demand was simple, a demand which the public could properly expect to be met.

But those in the know were not taken in by the election results. They've seen the connivance that attends laws that are not popular with lawmakers.

Greedy lawmakers have long since conned the public into believing that the public could best be served if the number of insurance firms in the state could be controlled.

Legislature, together with greedy insurance firms, effectively stymied competitive insurance in the State of California by controlling how many and whom.

That made the legislature, supposedly responsive to its constituency, partners with the insurance lobby, which is said to be one of the most powerful in the state.

Remember the November election? There were five insurance issues. It was one of the ploys used to confuse and divide the voters. But Prop. 103 won and the 20% rollback became law.

But it isn't the law. Insurance firms threatened lawsuits. Legislature and lobbyists sought loopholes that would eliminate or weaken the intent of Prop. 103. In their frenzy, the two entities apparently opened all the loopholes they could find before deciding that court testing by insurance firms might delay enforcement of the rollback for years or forever.

Legislature named Roxani Gillespie State Insurance Commissioner, and it soon became obvious that auto insurance rollback would face a major impediment.

Last week Gillespie ordered a $305 million rollback in the highly profitable homeowners and other-than-auto insurance. She reported that auto insurers lost $227 million in 1987.

This week the California Poll Study reported that approximately two-thirds of those polled said that they thought Prop. 103 was a good thing. Today, the same number are facing reality in saying that the rollback won't happen. Gillespie said that auto insurers income would be studied before her decision is forthcoming.

Harvey Rosenfield, author of Prop. 103 called Gillespie's program a "pile of junk" because she would be allowing auto insurers an 11.2% return, which is the industry's average profit for the past 15 years. Consequently, citizens are becoming disenchanted with insurance firms, the State Insurance Commission, and the legislature.

Maybe you can smile when you pay your insurance bill this year. Ha!

From Where I Sit

Is Lemon Grove Going to the Dogs?

I do believe that nearly every household in our block has a dog or dogs and that all the other streets of our fine community are the same.

People have dogs for several reasons:

- To be a faithful companion for the Seniors (My wife never licks my nose when I come home).
- To guard the premises (Our beloved dog is too old and crippled from arthritis to do much guarding of our property. I guess she could gum an intruder to death if she could hear or see him).
- To be a playmate for the kids (Our kids have all grown up now and have all "flown the nest").
- To help build character in youngsters with the responsibility of caring for a pet (Caring for the needs of my animal may have made a character out of me).
- To keep the cats off the property (Our old Lady just lays in our bed and watches the neighborhood cats eat her food).
- To serve as a live garbage disposal (My dog can con me out of food from my hungry mouth with her big brown eyes).

The neighbors have a big red and white warning sign on their fence: "Beware of Dog." Their watchdog is a Mexican Chihuahua, and can't weigh more than six pounds chock full of frijoles, but bark she does.

In early morning, something must trigger all the dogs in the neighborhood to bark or howl in unison. When I hear that eerie howling sound, it gives me the "willies," as I've read that dogs can foretell forthcoming storms or earthquakes.

"The Angelus Avenue Canine Choir" might be triggered by the "Bandito Trio" that roam the block at dawn looking for scraps of food from the trash cans that have been set out the night before. The garbage is strewn all over the street and has to be cleaned up before trash pick-up time. How do those scavengers know that our garbage is picked up on Wednesday and the street sweeper comes on Tuesday?

A near-crisis occurred in our block the other day. Sonny, our neighbor across the street came running over, "Have you seen our dogs? They both must have gotten out of the yard and are gone."

"I haven't seen 'hide nor hair' of 'em, so we better search the block, door-to-door." No one had any hope for my near-frantic neighbor man. He went so far as to inquire at the Sheriff's Office and Animal Control for his missing dogs.

Sonny dreaded the task of breaking the sad news to his wife when she returned home from work that afternoon. Before he could announce the missing pets, she blurted out, "Has Vickie, the dog groomer, returned the dogs yet? She picked them up this morning to have them all spruced up for the Memorial Day weekend."

You could actually see steam coming out of Sonny's ears.

Life would be pretty dull and serene on Angelus if it weren't for those loveable, furry creatures.

DMV requires employers to check driving records

Expanding a "pull notice" program requiring employers to check driving records of commercial drivers before and during their employment, the DMV announced that effective July 1, it applies to all who employ drivers holding Class 1/A and 2/B commercial driver licenses or Class 3/C licenses with special certificates.

The "pull notice" program provides employers with information concerning traffic convictions, accidents, driver license or certificate suspensions or revocations and other actions recorded on an employee's DMV record.

Certificate holders currently in the program include ambulance drivers, tour bus and farm labor vehicle operators, school bus, student pupil activity bus and youth bus drivers, radioactive material, bulk liquid and hazardous materials haulers, and special construction equipment operators. DMV officials estimate that the program may apply to more than 1.2 million drivers.

The "pull notice" program, mandated by AB 2706 (Katz), carries penalties for employers who hire or continue to employ a driver with a suspended or revoked driver license or special certificate.

This DMV program is also available on a voluntary basis for companies and organizations who employ drivers not covered by the mandatory program.

Employers wanting more information may telephone the department at (916) 732-0920 or write DMV Information Services, P.O. Box 944231, Sacramento, CA 94244-2310.

Sports Commentary

By John E. Wirges

Cathy Sherk teed up in the Ontario Open last week and dark clouds of unrest send chills of near fear through the Ladies Professional Golf Association (LPGA) membership.

In ladies' golf, such things aren't done. For very pragmatic reasons, the LPGA doesn't want any of their number challenging men's tournaments. The only exception is on invitation.

But Cathy, a non-exempt LPGA member, went out and qualified for the $100,000 Timex-BIC Ontario Open. She fired an even par 72 on the Port Colborne qualifying course to make the 96 man (...er...sorry) player field.

The Ontario Open was played on the Lookout Point Country Club carved out from the rock spires and deep basins of the Niagara narrows within mist range of Niagara Falls.

Cathy didn't play it well. She shot 91-81 (from the men's tees) in the opening rounds and, not unexpectedly, missed the 149 shot cut. Her poor play was caused by more than tourney pressure.

There was much ballyhoo in the Niagara Fronteer sports pages of Sherk challenging the men's tour and opening the door for women golfers to the riches of the PGA tour.

It is that kind of nonsensical ballyhoo that sends shivers of anxiety and dismay down the spines of LPGA proprietors. The last thing in the world LPGA hierarchy wants to do is send signals that its members are being tempted by the riches of the PGA tour.

Sherk said she had no thoughts of cracking the men-only barrier when she entered the qualifying tournament. She was just a home girl playing her home course.

Port Colborne has been her home and she used to be a member of the Lookout Point Country Club. Her 14-year-old son, Chris, served as her caddy, and her coach of 17 years, Lookout Point pro Gordon McInnis, was honored in a special ceremony. The Ontario Open is not a PGA event. The entire adventure was managed, produced and governed by and for Canadians.

Cathy's tee time was more like home cooking than a challenge to the status quo of professional golf.

Why all the worry and anxiety from the rank and file of the LPGA? Easy answer.

Very few, if any, women stars of the LPGA tour could survive the distance and challenges of PGA tour stops. There would be no women winners on the men's tour. In fact, very few would make the cut and fewer still would earn living wages.

On the other hand, if women breech the men's tour, there would be nothing to stop the long ball hitting young turks of golf to challenge the women's tour. And such a challenge would wipe it out. Men would muscle the LPGA tour dead in no time.

The LPGA tour has grown amazingly in popularity, both at the gate and on television. From a modest beginning in 1948, purses now stack up in the millions and players from the Far East and Europe add international interest to its undertakings.

Women may challenge exclusive men's clubs, stag bars, fraternal organizations and such like, under current U.S. law, as they see fit. But women golfers want no part of it.

LPGA members like things the way they are and when an occasional woman player crosses the line, even as innocently as Cathy Sherk did in playing the Ontario Open on her home course, they get upset. There's no ERA for the LPGA, thank you.

Letters from our readers

This letter is written in response to an article (August 3) concerning the pending relocation of the nutrition site from the Spring Valley Community Center. At least four issues raised therein cry out for further comment:

1. The decision to move the Spring Valley Nutrition Site was made not by one person acting arbitrarily but by the Lemon Grove Spring Valley Nutrition Board, which is made up of representatives from two churches and three service clubs in the area. At the present time six of the members reside in Lemon Grove; five in Spring Valley; three in La Mesa; and one in San Diego.

2. The board's concern over certain aspects of running the program at the Community Center is not new. In part because of a lack of full co-operation from Community Center personnel, the Board was prepared to authorize a site relocation as far back as the early part of 1986. Only the promise of better relations stayed the action then.

3. To say that "most" seniors at the Spring Valley site "were at a loss" as to the reasons for the move obscures the fact that a number of Spring Valley seniors have been upset with prevailing conditions at the Community Center and have been looking to the Board and/or to staff persons on site to help make the situation more pleasant. One participant, a past president of the Spring Valley Project Council, addressed the Board during the meeting at which the move-authorization was passed and urged us to take action to rectify a deteriorating situation. A significant number of participants are looking forward to relocating.

4. It is not the intention, plan, hope, wish, dream, or fantasy of the Board to consolidate the Spring Valley Nutrition Site with our similar one in Lemon Grove. We are convinced that each community needs its own site because that is the best way to make nutritious meals and the numerous other services we provide available to as many seniors as possible. And serving seniors is our only reason for being in business!

Edward E. Pettis, President
Lemon Grove Spring Valley
Nutrition Board

After relaxed practices, Crunchers ready for tournament

The Spring Valley Crunchers have wound down their pre-tournament practice schedule and will show their stuff along with over 60 of the best girls fast pitch teaks throughout the nation. The draw will be late Wednesday to select the bracket.

"The bracket that you are in makes a big difference in your opportunity to take a top spot in the tournament," commented manager Grace Brickner. "We all hope for a good draw. Our first game will be some time Thursday afternoon."

"We placed third in the tournament three years ago and we will be very pleased if we do as well as we did that year," said head coach John Brickner. "Finishing in the top eight gives us an automatic berth back to Nationals and an opportunity to play in the Hall of Fame Game in Oklahoma."

Coach Ralph Mora said that "practices were a little 'loosey, goosey' this week, but they know when to get down to business, and that will be when they step out onto that field in Sioux Falls."

College scouts from all over the nation will be at the tournament. They will be looking primarily at those girls still in high school. Most of the graduates have already decided on their schools.

The team members are Alison Brickner, bound for softball at UCSB, Andrea Byard and Ali Pniak- Grossmont Bound, Linh Darnell and Lisa Wall of Monte Vista Hign School, Angie Davenport, a Masters College Student, Amy Dawson, California Baptist softball scholarship, Michele Gomez and Lisa Mora, UCSD softball players, Erika Jonte and Tara Tanber of Christian high school, Cathy Slatinsky and Lisa Wilson, Chula Vista High, Lisa Perettie, SDSU, Buffy Myers, who will go to Cuyumaca College and Jody Zollinger who has chosen Idaho for her college career.

The girls are coached by Ralph Mora, John Brickner, Sherie Riley and Roma Dawson. The team is most thankful to those who have helped with the expenses, but are really short of the monies needed.

All contributions are tax deductible and can be sent to the Spring Valley Crunchers, 4751 Jeffer Lane, La Mesa, California 92041.

East County Girl Scouts chosen for special events

Fifteen East County Girl Scouts have been selected to attend international and national educational events this summer.

Leslie Gardner of La Mesa, is visiting Girl Guides in Denmark. Through international learning opportunities such as this trip, Girl Scouts like Leslie have a chance to see the world, to sample many cultures and to meet people whose lifestyles may be very different from their own.

During "Ho! West We Go!" Lori Brown of Spring Valley will lace up her hiking boots for an out-of-doors adventure that will include backpacking, archaeology, geology and archery activities in Wyoming.

The folk artists and craftsmen of "OK Folk Fest '89" were on hand to help Shandree Anderson of Spring Valley create her own folk arts--dolls, kites, puzzles and quilts--as she explored the beauty and history of Oklahoma with fellow Girl Scouts.

Becky Couvrette of La Mesa will improve her equestrian skills at "Cadettes on Horseback," a program in Wyoming designed for Cadette Girl Scouts, ages 13-15.

Jennifer Lynn of Spring Valley sailed through the San Juan Islands of the Pacific Northwest-from Seattle, Washington to the port of Victoria in Canada- aboard the sail training skies, "Adventuress."

All participating Girls are indeed fortunate to have these opportunities made available to them.

Volleyball teams forming at YMCA

The San Diego YMCA starts their Fall Co-Ed Volleyball League September 7, 1989. Teams consist of 7 or more players and a minimum of 2 women per team. For great fun and a tremendous workout, get with it and join a team. Cost per person is $15 before August 31; after that date add $5 more.

Good ability, fair play and great fellowship are stressed in the Downtown "Y" Volleyball Co-Ed League. Call the "Y" for more information at 232-7451.

Waterhogs never know when to stop. They happily scrub down the hood, getting their pride and joy to gleam.

And behind them, the hose gushes gallon after gallon of water down the gutter.

How do you know when you're using too much of a good thing?

If it's beginning to look like you could wade across your driveway, you've gone too far.

Long before you reach that point, however, you can go from waterhog to water tight.

Use a nozzle with an automatic shut-off on all your hoses. Use a bucket to soap your car. Spray to wet. Spray to rinse. It's easy.

Let's make waterhogs an endangered species.

The more we conserve, the better. For example, replace your old shower head with a nice new one that uses less water. Make sure to check all your faucets and pipes for leaks, then fix 'em. And wait for full loads before turning on your dishwasher or washing machine.

Conservation. Our way of life.

There's a lot we can do to be water tight. Quench your thirst for more information. Just give us a call at 619/297-3218.

Beware! The summer skunk season is upon us

By Stephanie Shipley

Hold your nose. The summer skunk season is upon us, and local animal control agencies have been getting plenty of calls. South County Animal Control, which handles calls for Lemon Grove and Spring Valley, says they may be getting as many as five or six calls a day. They don't keep count because they don't respond to skunk calls unless the animal is hurt, dead, or possibly rabid.

La Mesa Animal Control Officer Maxine Lynch estimates that their office gets three to five calls a day from the end of May through the month of August. As in Spring Valley and Lemon Grove, La Mesa Animal Control will not pick up a live skunk, but they will lend a trap if you're feeling brave enough to try catching the little striped stinkers for yourself.

"The number of skunks in East County is simply incredible," says Lynch. "I'd be willing to bet that if I could put a trap in every garden in La Mesa one night, there'd be a skunk in half of them the next morning." After a moment's thought she added, "There'd probably be a possum in the other half."

Although skunks are active in San Diego County year round, people notice them most in the summer. According to Lynch, this is the time that the new crop of babies, who were weaned in early April or May, start striking out on their own to find new territories.

Lt. Jim Wright, Animal Control Officer for the city of San Diego, gives another reason for the skunks' presence: all the new summer construction drives the skunks from their natural habitat, the fields and canyons, to take refuge in people's gardens.

A valuable pest control agent, the wild skunk will eat its own weight several times a week in grasshoppers, crickets, June bugs, field mice, and potato bugs. They will eat anything, however, and anyone who leaves catfood outside overnight is issuing an open invitation to neighborhood skunks, says Lynch.

"In the wild," she adds, "only about half the babies would survive, but in the city they have a protected environment and an unlimited supply of food. No wonder they're here in such numbers."

"If an adult skunk meets a dog or cat," says Lynch, "he will try to avoid a confrontation. He may even say to himself, 'Oh, yeah, this is my buddy who shares my catfood,' and go right on eating. Babies, however, are easily intimidated and will spray at anything. And their aim is deadly for eight to ten feet."

I was vaguely conscious of a 3 a.m. commotion the first time our dogs were skunked, but it was the odor that really woke me up. I didn't recognize it at first. The faint aroma of distant skunk that I had always rather enjoyed seemed to have nothing in common with the overpoweringly acrid, nauseating stench that was rapidly displacing the oxygen in our bedroom. I staggered out to the living room to find our dog, Faun, frantically rubbing her fur on the walls, carpet, and furniture.

"A lot of dogs do that," Lynch remarked. "The smell will never come out either. Even after cleaning, if you go on vacation and close the house up for a few weeks, it will smell skunky when you return."

Despite vigorous scrubbing with tomato juice, our dogs still smelled bad enough two weeks later that it was the first thing the vet noticed when we took them in for shots.

"Massengill Douche works better," Lynch informed me. "I have a friend whose two Rottweilers were skunked the night before an important dog show. I smelled the dogs after she put the douche on them, and it was hardly noticeable at all."

Lynch's advice if you want to prevent skunks from taking up residence on your property is to enclose all the spaces where they might like to build a den. "They like decks with warm Jacuzzis, especially in the wintertime," she said, "as well as the spaces under houses, sheds, and woodpiles."

"They are incredible diggers, and can move rocks larger and heavier than themselves to get back under your house if they have built a den there. The only solution is to cement it in."

Catfood left outside will pretty well guarantee that you'll have skunks, but so will food left in the garage, in fact anywhere the skunk can get to it. Lynch recently responded to a La Mesa resident's call to retrieve a skunk from a hallway inside the house. It had come in through the cat door.

But Lynch's favorite skunk call happened last year. A La Mesa man called his cat in for breakfast, only to see a second "cat" come marching through the door right behind it. The skunk then strolled down the hall and into the bedroom where the man's invalid wife was lying.

By the time Lynch arrived, it was curled up peacefully asleep in the closet. Lynch prepared a covered trap and baited it with a saucer of milk. Cautiously she inched the trap toward the unsuspecting skunk. Suddenly it looked up, sniffed the air and without so much as a glance at the nervously watching people, waddled into the trap and began lapping up the milk.

Our neighbor, Kelly Willaims, was not so lucky. She was peacefully asleep in the wee hours about a week ago, when her husband heard barking outside and opened the door to investigate. In a flash their dog, Sheba, dripping with eau-de-skunk, raced in, leapt onto the bed, and squirmed down under the covers beside her. The neighbors are still taking bets on whether Kelly will speak to her husband before the perfume wears off the dog.

Skunks aren't all bad, though. For one thing they're patriotic supporters of the Padres. Twenty-nine of them have visited the stadium this season, up from an average of 12 in recent years. In case you have skunks of your own and are wondering how to remove them, the stadium management has found an all-American solution. They bait their traps with peanut butter.

Joe Freed on the Movies

"Parenthood"

There are a handful of film directors that you can always count on to make fine motion pictures. Among them are Rob Reiner, Francis Ford Coppola, Steven Spielberg and now, Ron Howard. His string of hits has progressed beyond the limits of "it might be luck," (Splash, Gung Ho, Cocoon , Willow), and, with the arrival of his latest endeavor, "Parenthood," Howard is in position to become one of the most powerful directors in Hollywood.

From all angles, "Parenthood" is a delight, hitting every aspect and caricature of family life perfectly. The screenplay, by Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandell with help from Howard on the story, is literally inspired, with both writers drawing from their personal parenting experiences to create a script that is both humorous and dramatic, with just a soft hint of sentimentality.

The cast is excellent. No, not just excellent but super–excellent. Steve Martin has finally shed his "wild and crazy guy" image and gets a chance to show he can really act. Mary Steenburger gives a good performance and may just see a strong movie career reborn. Tom Hulce, who we haven't seen much of since "Amadeus," does a find job as the fallen away son, and Martha Plimpton ("Running on Empty") and Keanu Reeves ("Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure," "Dangerous Liaisons") are terrific as the teenage newlyweds.

But my favorites in the cast are Jason Robards as Grandpa and Dianne Wiest as a single mother struggling with emotional children. Both actors give some of their finest work in a long while and should receive Academy Award nominations, if the Academy doesn't forget about "Parenthood" because of its early release.The music, by Randy Newman, is beautiful and expressive, especially in the final scene, which is a montage of all the family members. There is no dialogue in the scene, so the only audio influence in the musical and the emotional intensity it relays is fantastic.

"Parenthood" is one movie I can recommend without reservation and without knowledge of any flaw. I truly loved it — in fact I saw it twice during its opening weekend — and you'll love it too.

Critic's Rating: A+

"Young Einstein"

Warner Brothers went to a great deal of trouble to make sure moviegoers knew that "Young Einstein", with its hero, Yahoo Serious (Yahoo?), was on the way. It seemed every new movie was preceded by a preview of Einstein's escapades, and prime-time television was flooded with 30 second salesmanship. Yes America, the wait was almost over! "Young Einstein- Adventurer! Hero! Lover! Genius! " was on the way. Trumpets! Fanfare!

The hype worked. I was honestly excited about the arrival of a "Serious Film." Yahoo Serious, who not only stars in the film, but also serves as its writer, director and producer, had appeared on a number of talk shows testifying to the outrageous humor of the screenplay, (supposedly inspired by the genius comedic style of Monty Python), and telling of the astounding financial success the film enjoyed in Australia. "Young Einstein" was looking more and more promising.

Finally, the movie was released and I was there opening night. After two hours within this Australian filmmaker's world, I emerged with my own proclamation for the moviegoing public.

"Young Einstein"? Big Deal.

The movie was O.K., but that's about all it was–just O.K. It's extremely difficult to enjoy mediocrity. Yahoo was charming enough, and some parts of the screenplay were funny, most notably Einstein discovering a cook making a kitten pie, prostitutes pondering the mysteries of the universe with Einstein as their mentor, and the introduction of the Wright Brothers- one white and one black. But most of the film was plain silly. Sometimes that can be a positive attribute, this time it wasn't.

I guess it's just one of those "interesting" films, sort of like a blind date you describe as having a great personality. I didn't hate it, I didn't love it. It was just...there.

Aussie Spectaular set for August 26 at the San Diego Wild Animal Park

A fair breeze rustles the eucalyptus branches as you quietly peek at a "mob" of lounging kangaroos. Behind you, a kookaburra calls his mate. Up ahead, strains of "Waltzing Matilda" float on the early evening air.

You leave the forest path and approach the clearing, where music plays, families dine on a scrumptious meal fresh off the "barbie," and children crowd around a rugged-looking man who recounts his many adventures in the trackless Outback.

It may be mid-winter in Melbourne, but it's sunny and warm at the San Diego Wild Animal Park—the perfect time and place for an authentic Australian Spectacular.

This special family event, scheduled for August 26, has everything you'd expect (and more) of a genuine barbecue in the land down under.

A striking Paul Hogan look-alike will entertain with his yarns and, after dark, guests can sit a spell around a campfire and listen to tales of life in colonial Australia.

The nippers (children) will have fun at the craft tables, where there'll be Aborigine face-painting, koala puppet-making, and a craft called "Bag-a-kangaroo."

Held from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Wild Animal Park's Mahala Ampitheater, the Aussie Spectacular will swing to the sounds of Dave's Aussie Bush Band.

A recreated Bush Camp and exhibit of unusual Aboriginal artifacts will allow guests a fascinating look at early Australian culture; guided tours through the Australian Rain Forest exhibit, up-close animal presentations, a display of exotic flora, and an educational film-and-slide show will feature the flora and fauna of the island continent.

Barbecued kabobs or bangers (sausage) and beef will be served, along with rice, tropical fruit salad, rolls and lemonade. To round out the evening festivities, special twilight monorail tours will depart Simba Station from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Tickets to the Aussie Spectacular are $18 for adults, and $10 for children 3-15 (for members of the Zoological Society of San Diego, $16 for adults and $8 for children). Admission to the Wild Animal Park, all exhibits, all tours and dinner are included in this special price.

Reservations must be made in advance, and more information is available by calling 747-8702, extension 5142.

Black and white copiers move over: Color is here

Bill Trask, general manager of Letter-Kraft Printing, and a client discuss future projects using the Canon Color Laser Copier. The Lemon Grove-based company recently purchased the $39,000 machine. The copier is able to reproduce full color documents or add color to black and white originals.

Color photos, transparencies, slides, even iron on transparencies can be reproduced in full color to nearly any dimension with Canon's Plain-Paper Color Laser Copier and Lemon Grove-based Letter-Kraft Printing joins roughly 25 San Diego printers to purchase this $39,000 machine.

According to Bill Trask, general manger for Letter-Kraft Printing, "We purchased the copier because we were able to identify markets that had a need for quality color copies. Applications of the color copier include graphic design, advertising layouts, architectural drawings, spreadsheets, sales reports, computer graphics and new business presentations. But the copier can also work for the individual who wants a color reproduction of a photo, a resume or a term paper; the uses are almost endless."

The copier was first made available in 1987. It is the first four color digital laser copier and so far no other company manufactures a copier with capabilities of this extent.

The Canon Color Laser Copier is able to reproduce four color copies or add one to three colors to black and white work. The copier can proportionally enlarge or reduce by 40–500 percent in 1 percent increments and it can manipulate the vertical and horizontal dimensions. Another feature enables the copier to enlarge originals up to sizes of 44 inches by 60 inches.

Customers will pay an average of $2–$3 per copy depending upon size and quantity.

"The capabilities of the Canon Color Laser Copier are revolutionary; we're learning new techniques and applications every day," Trask said.

Simas named manager at B of A

Joanne Simas has been named manager of Bank of America's Lemon Grove Branch, it was announced by David Berry, vice president and area manager for the bank's North/East San Diego County Area Management Group (AMG).

She will be responsible for the branch's business, real estate, and consumer lending, deposit acquisition, and other customer service activities, including its new Small Business Alliance resource for small business customers.

Simas brings 27 years of banking experience to her new position. Having first joined B of A as a teller in 1962 at the Hillcrest Branch, she progressed through positions of increasing responsibility. In 1965 she was employed by Wells Fargo and rejoined Bank of America recently as assistant vice president and manager of the Lemon Grove Branch.

According to Simas, Bank of America will be aggressively seeking new deposit and lending business in the Lemon Grove area following its 1988 recovery and record earnings through the first half of this year.

"The first half of the year was an excellent period for us both locally and around the state, and we've continued to build our loan and deposit totals during that time," Simas said. "We expect to be extremely competitive in the Lemon Grove marketplace through the remainder of the year, especially in real estate, home equity loans and small business accounts."

BankAmerica Corporation, Bank of America's parent, last month reported second quarter 1989 net earnings of $304 million, Simas said. Total earnings for the first six months of the year were $579 million, a 114 percent increase.

These quarterly earnings were a record for the corporation and represented the 11th consecutive quarter of improved results from operations and the eighth consecutive quarter of increasing profits.

Among the new services offered during this growth period, Simas noted, was the Bank of America Small Business Alliance designed to help small merchants gain the competitive edge in building their business. This is done in part by providing small businesses access to services and information not normally available to help them manage and grow their businesses.

Simas said the bank has also dramatically expanded its loan originations in recent years. In May, the latest month for which figures were available, BofA was the third largest mortgage lender in California based on the dollar amount of mortgage loans it originated in home purchase transactions.

The bank has also been active in the rapidly growing home equity loan market, according to Simas, and expects the market to continue to grow through the remainder of 1989 as consumers take increasing advantage of the continuing tax deductibility of interest payments still generally available with this type of credit.

"Although some people don't think of Bank of America as a major mortgage lender, the fact is that we've become a key player in the state's lending market, and we're taking steps to expand our market share in Lemon Grove as homes continue to mushroom in the surrounding area."

A native of Michigan, Simas is a graduate of Crawford High School and an alumna of Grossmont College where she studied business. She has continued her banking education over the years by completing coursework through the American Institute of Banking.

Case Number: 149756

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority allows the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative is required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to this petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire prior to four months from the date of the hearing noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisement of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. Assemblyman Pete Chacon announces support for anti-drug measure for schools

Assemblyman Pete Chacon (D-San Diego) has announced that, in conjunction with National Alcohol Awareness Day on August 13, he plans to support a critical legislative measure that would create the California Drug Free School and Communities Act of 1989.

"As a society, we are finally starting to come to grips with the impact of alcohol abuse," said Chacon. "We have dealt with some of the side effects, like drunk driving, but now we must focus on prevention."

Chacon said that he believes the first and best way to deal with prevention of alcohol abuse is to educate young people. That can best be achieved by reaching them in the schools before they experiment or become dependent on alcohol or other drugs.

"That is why I support AB 485 by Assemblyman Steve Clute. This act would provide for a comprehensive drug and alcohol prevention program for grades K-12. This would be taught along with health education and the material would be age appropriate."

Studies have shown that alcohol use is prevalent in high schools and junior highs with some children starting to drink in elementary school. Among today's teenagers, 70 percent have tried alcohol.

Assemblyman Chacon stressed that young drinkers sometimes become lifelong alcoholics. He noted that in California, alcohol is consumed at a rate 20 percent greater than the national average.

As a result, California deaths caused by cirrhosis of the liver exceeds the national average by more than 30 percent. Conservative estimates indicate that 12,000 infants born in California each year are suffering from alcohol or drug use during their mother's pregnancy.

"I have supported numerous legislative measures to implement comprehensive drug and alcohol education prevention programs," said Chacon. "Through this type of effort, a new climate will be created to ensure that everyone clearly understands the effect of alcohol, allowing them to make informed decisions about its use.

"As individuals, there are various ways we can assist the fight against alcohol abuse," Chacon continued. "We can start by setting a good example for our children and by talking to them about the use and misuse of alcohol. We should also discourage friends from driving when under the influence of alcohol."

Chacon urged individuals who want a list of alcohol related legislation to contact his district office at 232-2405. His staff can also provide contact with a community organization which offers alcohol abuse assistance.
